

VESUVIO: Blood of Naples — Moodbook

Ciprian Stefan Plesca

2026

- VESUVIO: Blood of Naples
 - Moodbook — Visual & Sonic Identity
 - 1. Cinematography
 - 2. Costume & Styling
 - 3. Architecture & Location Texture
 - 4. Naples as Character
 - 5. Color Palette
 - 6. Sonic Identity
 - 7. Inspirations

VESUVIO: Blood of Naples

Moodbook — Visual & Sonic Identity

1. Cinematography

- Night-dominant photography. The majority of key dramatic scenes are lit and shot at night or in low, practical light — streetlamps, interiors, single sources — reinforcing the show's theme of things kept hidden.
- Wide establishing shots of Vesuvius recur as punctuation between scenes, always static, always distant — the mountain never moves, everything around it does.
- Handheld intimacy indoors, locked-off control outdoors — the camera mirrors the difference between the family's private, emotionally volatile world and its careful public presentation.
- High contrast, desaturated grade — blacks are deep, skin tones stay warm and human against a cool, muted environment.

2. Costume & Styling

- The family: tailored but never flashy — old money restraint, not gangster-genre excess. Salvatore in muted greys and navy; Lucia in structured, elegant pieces that read as armor.
- The rising generation (Marco, Antonio): sharper, more modern silhouettes — a visible generational break from their elders' more traditional style.
- Street level: grounded, working-class realism — no stylization for its own sake.

3. Architecture & Location Texture

- Contrast between Naples' Baroque historic center (warm stone, ornate detail) and the dense concrete rioni (utilitarian, weathered, intensely lived-in).
- The Ranieri villa: old-world interiors — dark wood, heavy fabric, religious iconography — deliberately at odds with the modern criminal economy that funds

- it.
- The port: industrial scale, floodlit, cold — the show’s primary “business” location, visually opposed to the villa’s warmth.

4. Naples as Character

Naples is shot as a city of contradictions held in the same frame: tourists and territory, sunlight and shadow, sacred and profane — often literally, via church processions passing streets that, hours later, become crime scenes.

5. Color Palette

Palette Role	Description
Primary	Charcoal, near-black navy, deep slate
Secondary	Warm stone / sun-bleached ochre (historic center exteriors)
Accent	Muted gold — reserved for ritual, power, and key emotional beats
Blood	Deep, desaturated red — used sparingly, never glorified

See /assets/cover_art.jpg for the key art built directly around this palette.

6. Sonic Identity

The show’s sound identity is anchored by its original Neapolitan-dialect theme track — dark melodic trap blended with traditional instrumentation cues (bells, sub-bass, industrial percussion) — establishing a sonic signature distinct from typical string-driven crime-drama scoring. See /docs/LYRICS_BILINGUAL.md and /assets/track_final.mp3.

7. Inspirations

For tonal and craft reference only (not derivative intent):

- Multi-generational, character-first crime family sagas
- European regional-language prestige drama
- Naturalistic, natural-light-driven cinematography in contemporary European film