VESUVIO: BLOOD OF NAPLES

Episode 1: "A Pace" ("The Peace")

Pilot script — Act One (sample pages). Full pilot available on request.

FADE IN:

EXT. NAPLES SKYLINE — NIGHT

Mount Vesuvius sits black against a bruised sky. Below it, the city sprawls in a thousand scattered lights — apartment blocks, church domes, the dark line of the sea.

A distant SIREN. A dog barks. Somewhere, church bells mark the hour.

SUPER: NAPLES. TEN YEARS AFTER THE PEACE.

CUT TO:

INT. RIONE — STAIRWELL — NIGHT

Cramped, concrete, lit by a single bare bulb. MARCO RANIERI (34, coiled energy under a calm surface) climbs fast, two steps at a time. He's not running — he's late.

MARCO (under his breath) Non ce sta tempo. Non ce sta tempo. (There's no time. There's no time.)

He reaches a door, raises a fist to knock — stops. Breathes. Composes himself completely. Knocks once, calm.

CUT TO:

INT. RANIERI VILLA — DINING ROOM — CONTINUOUS

A long table. Old money, not new. DON SALVATORE RANIERI (58, still, watchful) sits at its head. DONNA LUCIA RANIERI (55, elegant, missing nothing) pours wine like she's done it a thousand times without ever once being just a hostess.

Marco enters. Salvatore doesn't look up.

SALVATORE Ten years ago tonight, guagliò. You know what tonight is.

MARCO I know what tonight is.

SALVATORE (finally looking up) Then you know why you don't come through that door late.

LUCIA (smooth, defusing) He's here. Sit. Eat. The dead don't mind waiting a few more minutes, Salvatore.

A beat. Salvatore almost smiles. Marco sits.

SALVATORE (raising his glass) 'A Pace.

LUCIA / MARCO (together) 'A Pace.

They drink. Outside the window — far off, easy to miss — a faint red line glows on the dark shape of the volcano. Nobody at the table sees it. The audience does.

CUT TO:

EXT. PORT OF NAPLES — CONTAINER YARD — NIGHT

Floodlights. Containers stacked like a maze. A SHIPPING FOREMAN (50s, nervous) walks fast beside ANTONIO ESPOSITO (32, magnetic, barely-contained energy).

ANTONIO Uagliù, tell me again — whose name is on this contract?

FOREMAN Ranieri's. Same as it's been for—

ANTONIO (cutting him off, calm — which is worse) Ten years. I know how long. My father knows how long. Everyone in this city knows how long.

He stops walking. Looks up at a container being lowered by crane — watches it a beat too long.

ANTONIO (CONT'D) Tonight, that changes. Just a little. Just enough that they notice.

FOREMAN (quiet, scared) Antò... this breaks the Peace.

ANTONIO (a real smile — the scary kind) No. It just moves the line. There's a difference. (beat) Or there used to be.

He nods once. Off-screen, machinery grinds to a sudden, wrong stop.

CUT TO:

INT. RANIERI VILLA — DINING ROOM — LATER

The meal continues, warm, almost normal. Marco's phone buzzes once on the table. He glances at it. His face doesn't change — but Lucia notices that it doesn't change, which tells her everything.

LUCIA (quiet, only to Marco) Whatever that is, it can wait until dessert.

MARCO (matching her tone) It already didn't.

Salvatore, oblivious, raises his glass again, toasting something only he can see.

SALVATORE Ten years of peace. Let's make it twenty.

Marco raises his glass. Doesn't drink yet.

MARCO (to himself, almost) 'O silenzio parla chiaro. (Silence speaks clearly.)

SMASH CUT TO BLACK.

END OF ACT ONE (SAMPLE).

Full Episode Outline (Acts Two-Four)

ACT TWO: Marco is dispatched to assess the port incident quietly, per Salvatore's orders — no retaliation, only information. He crosses paths with Elena Ferraro for the first time, unaware she's already building a file on his family. Antonio, meanwhile, tests how far his father is willing to let him push.

ACT THREE: Marco reports back with more questions than answers. Salvatore insists on treating the incident as isolated; Lucia privately disagrees and begins her own inquiry. Don Pietro receives a confession that hints the "accident" at the port was no accident at all.

ACT FOUR: The episode closes on parallel images — Salvatore alone on the villa balcony, looking toward Vesuvius; Antonio watching the same mountain from the port; Elena pinning the first thread of her case to a board. The Peace is still standing. Everyone at the table can feel it starting to lean.
